horrible controls, bad level editor, i would only reccomend it to troll someone. horrible controls, bad level editor, i would only reccomend it to troll someone. This is a side-scrolling shoot'em up with some really good visuals. The game seems to be quite packed with backgrounds, enemies and music requiring around 4 GB to install. Once you optimise your mouse sensitivity and realise that your ship has both primary and secondary weapons, the game is actually quite fun to play. It has 8 levels in total and apparently you can design your own levels and enemies (although I haven't tried the editor much).. The animations look really good but the gameplay is total crap. Enemies don't scroll by, they stay around moving in a stupid way as more and more continue to appear since you probably can't kill them fast enough. They all shoot at you at once, you can barely see what you're doing, you die quickly while feeling like you're not even playing. Everyone seems to be comparing this to classic arcade games like R-Type, but I'm just not seeing it. Those games are too hard for my liking, but not because they're unplayable. As for the customization. they hugely advertise that you can change anything, even the default stuff. But if you import your own image, and try to change the animation properties to your liking, it will refuse to let you by saying it's protected. Even if you attempt to make your own level from scratch, same thing will happen if you try to change the player's animation properties. So I unfortunately gave up on this..
